Plastic waste can affect the environment by making the world polluted. It can also threaten aquatic life. Other than that it will spread toxins. We can reduce plastic waste by recycling the plastic that we do not need

No to plastics
Plastic waste affects the environment as plastic takes years for them to decompose. In addition, plastic can be released toxic substances into the soil when they are exposed. Plastic is also harmful to human health when burnt as it releases toxic substances which can also pollute.

We can reduce plastic waste by:
1. Bringing our own reusable shopping bags when we go shopping.

My personal carbon footprint is 5707 kg and I plan to reduce it by taking more public transport such as a bus and the MRT instead of personal vehicles like cars to reduce the impact of my carbon footprint.

I used to think recycling is a easy process but now I think that it isn't easy at all, there is a total of 5 stages for plastic to be recycled.

I plan to reduce it by using lesser water. For example taking shorter showers because I often take long showers.

My personal carbon footprint is about 3000+. I am planning to reduce it by not wasting any water, not spending too much money on clothings, ask for the right amount of food so that I can finish it and not leave a piece and refill water bottle using my own bottle instead of buying a new one.

Recycling Campaign

Example by Miss Charlene Wang

I used to think recycling is not impactful, but now I think that it is impactful and important because I learnt that if we all recycle, we use lesser energy to create materials that are new. Carbon emissions and pollution will also be greatly reduced. With that, I pledge to often sort out recyclable materials (such as metal cans) from the trash before placing them into the blue
